

Ferrell Hollow Farm -- Alan & Cindy Daigre

The property known as Ferrell Hollow Farm was originally 200+ acres and belonged to the Ferrell family. When the last descendant of that family, Eliza Ferrell Dickens, passed away in 1988, the farm was auctioned off by her children. Up for sale again in early 1996, it was purchased by Cindy and consisted of the 1909 original farm house and 50 acres. A few years later Cindy married Alan Daigre and then purchased another 20 adjacent acres, totaling 70 acres altogether.

It had been a dream of theirs to build a Pioneer style log home with all the modern conveniences. That labor of love began in 2002. They lived in the farm house until 2004, when the custom built (by Alan and just a couple of other talented local craftsmen) log home was completed!

Under Cindy's direction, Ferrell Hollow Farm has become a highly respected equine facility, specializing in the needs of senior, retired horses. Almost no expense is spared, making sure these beautiful horses have the most comfortable retirement they could wish for. Cindy's goal is to give back to them for their lifetime of hard work. She has retired carriage horses from New York City and Michigan, a retired Jousting horse from New York, as well as retired pleasure horses of different breeds. To date, the oldest resident is 32! Caring for senior horses means constant work and a lot of love 7 days a week! Cindy has also written several articles for nationally known equine publications, makes Herbal Blends & Natural Products for equines from herbs grown in her garden, as well as Natural Body Products, inspired by plants she lovingly tends for, most notably Lavender and Calendula. The proceeds from all of the products made and sold go towards helping care for the senior horses!

www.ferrellhollowfarm.net

It wasn't until after Alan became a part of Ferrell Hollow Farm that he wanted to pursue a livelihood using his hands to create, far different from his previous career as a mental health counselor. He is now known for his fine furniture creations, most notably, the award winning Rope Rocker, all of which are made from his custom built wood working shop on the property. Alan travels to many high end craft shows each year, where he sells his custom designed furniture.

www.alandaigre.com

Ferrell Hollow Farm is viewed by appointment only.